WHEELING, MARCH 6, 1890.

The West wants water for irrigation. Come to West Virginia, O. West, and find all the water you need without having to dig ditches and build storage reservoirs.

Yours "Jack" Lincoln made a noble fight for life. All was done for him that medical science suggested. But death had the start and won the race. The brave boy's parents have the sympathy of their countrymen.

The Chicago Tribune asks whether anybody objects to holding both the great National conventions in 1892 in that city. Where else can they be held with equal convenience and comfort? Chicago is the Convention City.

An effort to stop vivisection in Philadelphia has failed, the prosecution being obliged to admit that the animal operated on gave no evidence of pain. The vivisection of animals of the lower order is for the benefit of man, and therefore is justifiable.

Desiring to assist the Senate in its efforts to learn who gives away the secrets of its executive sessions, the INTELLIGENCER begs to suggest once more that the Senate let go of that useless contrivance. Abolish the so-called secrets and it will not be so hard for Senators to keep them.

WHEELING might have had the next National Republican League Convention if West Virginia had been on the ground in force to push the matter. But Cincinnati is handy, and West Virginia will drop down next year to see how much the League has grown. The League will grow.

The Collector of the port of New York urges that detectives be taken out of the Civil Service classification, giving as a reason that "often times the best detectives are illiterate." The Collector has present need of good detectives and cannot get them because they cannot pass the examination. A detective should be selected because he is a detective, not because he is qualified to be a college professor.

A REPORTER of the New York Herald establishes once more the well known fact that Ludlow street jail is not a veritable dungeon for men who have money. If you can buy the co-operation of the officers, which does not cost high, you can take your walks abroad, go out at night, and come back to the jail quite mellow; and if you don't like to get drunk by yourself you can get an obliging officer to go along and keep you company in the drunk. The value of the information is to show that Ludlow street jail has not reformed.

Worse and More of It.

The Parnellites are having sweet revenge on the London Times and the Tory Government. The London Times got through with one sensation that they furnish it with another. This time they came to the front with proof that when the Times offered an enormous sum for perjury to prove its allegations. It would be unfair to the Times to suppose that it stood alone in this effort. The Tory Government was back of the Times all through this disgraceful scheme to ruin Parnell and the Irish cause.

Cruel as the Russian Government is, it has never equaled this. When it wants to imprison or kill Russia does it because it has the power, not because it professes to have evidence to warrant the act.

A Remarkable Scene.

The scene that was witnessed in Nashville, Tennessee, yesterday was as remarkable as it was pleasing. A National Republican convention, having accepted an invitation from the Democratic Governor and Legislature to visit them at the Capitol, marched nearly 700 strong into the legislative halls, headed by a band playing "Dixie," and were accorded a welcome the enthusiasm of which could not have been excelled had it been in honor of a Democratic convention.

It was a notable demonstration of the proverbial hospitality of the South, and it cannot fail to have a wholesome effect upon the entire country.

That the bitterness of party warfare can be forgotten on such occasions, is another evidence of the stability of the Government and that our common brotherhood suffers little from the heat of party politics. Such an occurrence as that at Nashville could not take place in any other country on the globe.

The Army and the Navy.

Young men who enlist in the Army or the Navy in search of an easy life of adventure soon get their eyes opened. The case is not there and the adventure is of a very matter-of-fact kind. Uncle Sam expects work from his soldiers and sailors, in return for which he pays them fair wages and promises them fair treatment.

In two cases recently brought before the public through the press there is good reason to think that enlisted men have been brutally used. The case of Trooper Will includes serious charges against Lieutenant Steele, who, if the charges be true, should be driven out of the Army as quickly as red tape proceedings will permit. The case of Fireman Walker shows Commander McCulla in a worse light. If the stories about the cruise of the Enterprise be founded on fact McCulla's behavior through the whole cruise has been a disgrace to the Navy and to the country.

Whatever may be the truth in these cases the Government should show by prompt action that when an enlisted man brings a charge against an officer the case will be as quickly inquired into as when the enlisted man is the accused person; and that when an officer has merited punishment, no matter how severe, he will be treated with no more favor than an enlisted man would be. There is no better way to get desirable young men into the military service of the country and to keep them there.

Democratic Ways to Get to Congress.

By double-acting ballot-boxes and self-acting revolvers the Democracy of the First District of Arkansas sent to Congress a man whom the people of the district did not elect. By the votes of the Republicans that man will be sent back to the chair by the same means.

In the First District of West Virginia the deed was done by changing the ballots as they lay in the Clerk's office, a gentler way to accomplish the same result. And that man is somewhere on the way home to the bosom of the fellows who did the job for him.

If there were a guarantee that ever House of Representatives would be Republican, the revolver, the double-acting ballot-box and the handy pencil would not be used to send men to Congress, for it would also be known that they could not remain there. And this would be well for the country.

The Chesapeake & Ohio Canal.

The effort to induce the State of Maryland to turn over to a railroad company, understood to be the West Virginia Inland, the wrecked Chesapeake & Ohio Canal, is characterized as a job. Doubtless the men who desire to use the bed of the canal for railroad purposes think they see profit in the venture. Doubtless, also, the interest of shippers along the line of the canal would be served best by maintaining the canal.

The question is whether the owners of the canal are willing to restore it to a condition of usefulness and to keep up that condition for water transportation, the next thing is to use it for railroad transportation. It is to be supposed that the owners' interests will be closely watched and that the property will not be given away. If one railroad company will not offer the present value of the canal, perhaps another will.

In its present state the canal is of no use to anybody. That it will be improved as part of a great waterway connecting the Ohio river at Pittsburgh with tide water is hardly to be supposed. "It is a consumption devotedly to be wished," but the difficulty would be to induce capital to take hold of so costly a venture.

Two Administrations.

The New York World celebrates the completion of President Harrison's first year in office. The celebration takes the form of a broadside on his Administration, including appointments and a great deal that has little relevancy to the subject.

It is all there is no record of the appointment of jail-birds, gamblers and shoulder-birds. Appointments of the sort figured largely in the record of President Cleveland's first year, and thousands of Democrats were disgusted accordingly.

The most damaging appointment charged up to President Harrison is that of the uncle of Baby McKee, the great offense of that appointee being that he is the uncle of the much-disputed baby.

President Harrison may go gracefully out of office at the end of his first term, but he will not be driven out by such inconsequential publications as that of the World.

The Iron Outlook.

New York Commercial Bulletin.

The recent collapse in the British iron trade has led to a good deal of attention here, chiefly because of its bearing upon our own market. The "boom" in England had been carried to such a length as to practically suspend our imports from that quarter, of course stimulating the demand for American iron. It is important to us, therefore, to understand the causes of the break abroad. Fortunately they appear, according to the latest volume of our home or foreign trade. The London Economist attributes the depression entirely to speculative causes and financial weakness, and looks for improvement as soon as the influence of the market has been exhausted. Close money and stimulated the break abroad, but this has since passed over. The Economist also expects to see the stocks in store drawn upon more freely; and, as foreign manufacturers have been ordered to order their books, it does not appear that their reduction in the price of manufactured iron for a time at least. Should these expectations be realized, and the British iron trade continue firm, it will of course have a strengthening influence here.

The Chances of Winning.
